Will wants to go towards and pick the injured bird up from the ground.	Mother turns around and tries to pull Will away. She does not want him to pick up the bird. She puts her hands in her hair, seems troubled. She does not know what to do. She does not know how to take the bird home.	Mother decides to wrap the bird in her scarf and places it in her handbag. She decides that they could take the bird. She has a solution for how they could take the bird home.	When Will and his mother get home, the father is not happy.	The father puts his hands in his hair. He stares at his boy as if asking why he brought the bird home. He does not look at the bird, just stares at his son. Maybe he does not know how to care for the bird.	The father decides to help Will to care for the bird. His body language changes and he looks concerned about the bird.	When the bird's bandages are removed, it crashes to the ground.	Will and his mother are shocked. Wills' mother brings her hands towards her eyes, as if she is too scared to look.	The bird is gently picked up, fed and kept a while longer at Will's home. The bird gets to see that other birds are out there. The bird is given hope.
Solution The bird's wing is healed and the bird flies away safely.
